JOINT VENTURE

The agony of the UK's 400,000 rheumatoid arthritis sufferers could be eased by a herbal remedy made from rosehip berries, which has been used in medicine and cooking for centuries. German researchers found that patients reported a "significant improvement" in their condition – including less pain – after taking rosehip powder for six months (in addition to their conventional drugs). Scientists want to do more tests to see if these vitamin C-rich berries can form the basis of a new drug.
